SANDEL 4-IN-1™ MARKER

HELPING REDUCE SURGICAL ERRORS

Wrong site procedures are highly preventable surgical errors. However, it is estimated that 1,500 to 2,500 wrong site incidents – including wrong side, wrong organ, wrong implant, and wrong person – occur each year in the United States alone.

To help prevent wrong site errors, the World Health Organisation recommends member states adopt the universal protocol, which includes a “time out” to verify the site, procedure, and patient.

SANDEL® TIME OUT® devices are designed to help surgical teams and hospitals comply with these recommendations. These strategically placed, bright orange reminders compel surgical teams to take a time out and help reduce the incidence of surgical errors.

SANDEL TIME OUT® products serve as a prominent reminder for the surgical team to pause and implement the World Health Organisation protocol for a time out, as stated in the Surgical Safety Checklist.

SANDEL TIME OUT® Markers are designed to mark the correct surgical site on patients' skin. All markers feature a TIME OUT® reminder and a triangular barrel to prevent rolling.

- Bright orange colour, making them easily recognizable
